Название доклада: Политические системы в странах Ближнего и Среднего Востока/ Political systems in countries of the Middle East

Ведущий преподаватель: Поцыбина Е.П.

Abstract:

Many people nowadays aren't aware of the political situation about political systems in the countries of the Middle East. Almost everyone won't respond what is the political governing in such states as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Iran, etc. My work is to present the existing governance and political system in a row of main states of the Mideast: Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Iran, Pakistan and Israel.

Название доклада: In search of the French Crown: who could take the throne if France became a monarchy?/ В поисках французской короны: кто мог бы занять престол, если бы Франция стала монархией?

Ведущий преподаватель: Яковлева И.О.

Abstract:

Napoleon III (1852-1870) was the last actual monarch in the French history. After his dethroning the Third Republic regime was established, since then France has not changed its republican form. However, this does not mean that potential pretenders to the throne disappeared together with the Second Empire... In my report I will tell about the history of three monarchic "parties" (legitimists, bonapartists, and the House of Orléans) and their modern representatives.

Ведущий преподаватель: Перцев Е.М.

Abstract:

This issue has always generated a great deal of debate among academics. According to the prediction of the Institute for Demographic Research in Paris, the Earth's population is going to be approximately 10 billion. Water might come to an end in 17 years, oil - in 30 years. On the other hand, some scientists believe that the problem of overpopulation is overestimated. The report attempts to answer the following questions: Can the problem of overpopulation be solved? What should be done to protect our planet?

Ведущий преподаватель: Шмараева А.А.

Abstract:

Speaking of mobile technology today, one must admit that it has become an inseparable part of people's lives. It has changed the way we study, work and communicate. However, it has its pros and cons. As a negative effect, it could affect people's ability to communicate with each other. In particular, it does influence the language used in messages. There is even 'texting language' as text messaging is a popular means of communication today.

Abstract:

Politics is considered to be a male privilege. However, there are a lot of inspiring examples of women who have had an impact on the course of history. According to opinion polls, people all over the world do not welcome women as proper candidates for public offices. Over recent years women have obtained more political and social rights but in some cases it is difficult to exercise them. Gender equality should lead to gender equality in politics.

Ведущий преподаватель: Криштоф Е.М.

Abstract:

Undoubtedly, the primary shock British experts received after the announcement of referendum results has waned off after several summer months. Nowadays European political elite targets to find the most permanent solution to this dilemma. It is obvious that British lieges were unlikely to understand all backlash for the economy and foreign policy of the United Kingdom. Nevertheless, the national plebiscite showed not only a dissatisfaction of European Union's migratory policy but also a significant increase of popularity of right-wing forces throughout the Old World. This research intends to assess their chances of changes in different states.

Abstract:

Today Europe is experiencing a great migration crisis. What're the reasons of such a great amount of refugees and migrants in the EU? The reasons: conflict in Syria, actions of ISIS, armed clashes, poverty. What're the specific characteristics of migration crisis? Mass death of migrants; among refugees are those, who have already taken part in armed clashes. Conclusion: Europe tries to solve the problem, but the dynamics of crisis shows that in the nearest future it'd be hard to improve the situation.

It seems obvious that an effective individual can solve many problems. Consequently, she/he would have less problems than it was be at the beginning. This chain is very logical. But does it work in reality? No. The more problems we can solve, the more new ones turn up. So, more challenges arise before effective people. The same scheme is appropriate for states. Economically developed countries meet lots of challenges. It is necessary to react quickly and to adjust to new systems. But the big problem is the high rate of change that accumulates stress in the society. People in such countries concern mostly about economic issues (their economic prosperity, career etc.)

Ведущий преподаватель: Яковлева И.О.

Abstract:

Adaptation of migrants includes a wide range of issues including legal, socioeconomic, sociocultural and other aspects. It is most interesting to research it at two levels: institutional (activity and development of the individual in a new society) and personal (social and psychological processes). Today, in each country there are established norms regarding the status of a migrant and the perception of it. What are the challenges of the migration process? How difficult is it for migrants to become a part of a new society? Our goal is to learn more about the differences in migrant status in different countries of the world. Our objective is to consider features of migrants' social rights and to formulate hypothesis of migration policy of countries through their law-making activity.

Название доклада: Influence of leading questions on a person's recall of a witnessed event/ Влияние наводящих вопросов на воспоминания человека о засвидетельствованных им событиях

Ведущий преподаватель: Мурза А.Б.

Abstract:

This report is a replication of a psychological experiment by Loftus and Palmer with additional modifications. In the experiment I have investigated how leading questions affect memory of a person about an event they just have witnessed. Namely, the participants were shown videos of floating motor boats (colliding cars in the original study) and then were asked at what speed they floated/rushed (collided/contacted/etc. in the original study).

Abstract:

Can you imagine any metropolis without MIA, and any state without the departments of control and supervision? The humanity needed security in ancient times – first from predators, then from itself. It is also relevant today. The creation of nuclear weapons, the First and the Second World wars motivated mankind to think not only of national, but also of collective security. In this report I will address the main humanitarian problems of the topic that affect governments' agencies and international institutions.

Abstract:

One of the most significant problems the world is the problem of orphanhood. Unfortunately, the orphans is not a new phenomenon for the world. In order to prevent the increase in the number of children, teachers of state institutions for orphans have to solve the problem of their preparation for family life, and they need a based approach to the development of educational programs and the creation of conditions for their implementation.

Abstract:

In my report, I would like to reveal the theme of how a war affects a human personality in Remarque's books and attempt to consider its evolution in the early period of his creative work. I have chosen this theme because I am certain that war is an awful and unnatural phenomenon. I am convinced that the books of the great German writer can help us to raise awareness of the unhuman character of a war.

Abstract:

Andrzej Walicki (born in 1930) is a contemporary living historian of Russian and Polish philosophy from Poland, who is working now in England and the USA. He is the author of more than 400 publications (most of them in English) about Polish and Russian philosophy, philosophy of history and liberal political thought of the XIX-XX centuries. Given today's highly controversial conditions of international relations, it is interesting to point out that he takes a pro-Russian political position and often writes different articles about Russia, about V. Putin as an outstanding political figure and about a particular role of our country in political and economic processes in contemporary world.

Abstract:

We have fundamental opposition between “easy and absurd” and “fanciless and rational” patterns of human being: the first type represents a free, bright perception of the world, children’s perception. The second type is a trivial, ordinary perception which is peculiar for adults. The research attempts to reveal an ontological basis of both approaches. The main conclusions: for human’s “easy” being there exist some obstacles such as dominant of rationality, induration of soul, fear of others, social stereotypes, etc.

Abstract:

The stereotypes are so deeply ingrained in our consciousness that we have ceased to pay attention to them. Most people do not understand the power of the prejudice, and this creates a lot of problems. Scientists in Russia and abroad have long researched this phenomenon and its impact on decision-making in everyday life. Often prejudices hinder the adoption of adequate solutions, with the probability of occurrence of conflicts increasing. Abstract:

Biocultural diversity is the relation between the diversity of nature and culture in a complex socio-ecological adaptive system. The nature component refers to the flora and fauna in their natural habitat (biodiversity), and the culture component refers to the human lifestyle developments influenced by the surrounding ecosystems, including food, clothing, housing, language, religion and arts (cultural diversity). In Japan, such examples of cultural lifestyle blending with nature are more commonly found in rural villages, however due to numerous factors this harmonious link between nature and culture is under threat.

Abstract:

During the second half of the XX century there has been a consistent increase in the values of global cities in the socio-political system of society. It follows that the recognized actors of globalization are global cities. They act as cultural, business, political and financial centers of national and global level. The emergence of global cities – it is not only a unique historical event, but also a test for the nation states. The researchers of the Chicago school wrote that the big cities are the focal point of the problems. Often, these problems are closely linked and are common to all global cities.
