Reflections on Animals in British Literature/ Размышления о животных в британской литературе

The report explores how animals are presented in various works and what these representations signify about British cultural attitudes towards animals from an ecocentric perspective. Of course, literature strives to explore the world around us and as animals are part of this world, animals are present in literature. The question here is whether animals are present as representatives of human constructs, or more realistically, as animals living as animals in the natural world. Alternatively, it can be seen that as they are not members of human society, animal characters have been used by writers as devices with which to create distance between the reader and society to subvert and so critique this society. Finally, attention is drawn to how animals have been depicted in a more compassionate and natural way in the last two centuries, in tandem with changes in British society.

Brexit and political parties. An analysis of how it has changed British politics/ Брексит и британские политические партии. Анализ изменений британской политики

The presentation is about Brexit and the political intrigue which surrounds the decisions being made by British Parliament. The report focuses on the ideological split between the parties of Britain and why each party feels the way they do on the decisions of the EU. The final part of the presentation focusses on the public perception of Brexit and what we as a country could do moving forward with the decision of the referenda. The conclusion is that it must be a cross party alliance of decision making to believe, through public opinion and research, that this would yield better results for the countries future.

The New Silk Road: a Political Marketing Concept for World Dominance/ Новый Шелковый Путь: политическая маркетинговая концепция мирового господства

The Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st-century Maritime Silk Road (simply known as The New Silk Road) was a Chinese initiative aimed at promoting the bilateral relations of China and its neighbors; however, the initiative had since then traversed the region's borders and become a global project. It had evolved from a speech given by Chinese premier Xi Jinping in Kazakhstan in 2013.

The commemorative practices in the communities of Russian-speakers abroad (analyzed as per research of relevant student societies in the various universities in the UK)/
Коммеморативные практики в русскоговорящих сообществах за рубежом (анализ на основе исследования релевантных студенческих клубов в различных университетах в Соединенном Королевстве)

This message is based on the results of a study held among Russian speakers studying in different universities in the UK. The target was to investigate the popular commemorative practices that Russian speaking students support and transmit. Analyzing the data gives an idea of how the identity of Russian-speaking communities abroad is constituted and distributed, what is defined as “purely Russian” or nostalgically “home”, and how particular selection of commemorative practices reflects collective memory and common values of participants of the community.

The Issue of National Identity in Modern Portugal/ Проблема национальной идентичности в современной Португалии

The goals of the research are to trace the evolution of the national identity of Portugal until 1974 when the country had the status of a colonial power; and to reveal the challenges to the national identity that the Portuguese society had to face against the background of the democratization processes. There are three interrelated aspects here:

- the attitude of Portugal towards its colonial past;
- the integration to the European Union and active participation in resolving the international issues;
- the international activity within the Community of Portuguese Language Countries.

The issue of unprepared independence for Cyprus/ Проблема неподготовленной независимости на Кипре

Cyprus once was one of the most important port in the Mediterranean Sea for trade and military purposes. This island has been ruled by many different countries for more than 450 years and suddenly after the short-term independence movements, gained its freedom in 1960. Nobody cared about the idea of various people with their own cultures and traditions living in Cyprus. As well as for what they can do and create with no overlord above them.

Creativity as a way of expressing political protest/ Творчество как способ выражения политического протеста

Since the 1960s we can observe such a curious tendency as rising of so called protest music. Of course, there were many authors who were expressing their political views via art but only from this period it acquired a mass scale. We would like to talk mostly about music because rock and then rap became the most popular way to show the disagreement. This led to emergence of subcultures which opposed themselves to state and politics in general. We would like to analyze the history of these tendencies from that time to nowadays and compare two ways of expression of political activity: direct (meetings, revolution) and indirect (via art).

Analyzing and comparing pension systems in European countries/ Сравнительный анализ пенсионных систем европейских стран

The research is strived to analyze the features of pension systems in Europe. Reporters identify the ways Europe has created and inherited the system which now divides people into different groups, classes, how it influences their views on politics and life as a whole process. Although this system has been brought from the history of the world, nowadays it is as relevant as it never was due to the fact that several countries of European Union and one outside of the coalition have made some serious amendments to their pension systems. Reporters will examine the situation and give their estimations for the future.

The problem of drug trafficking in Latin America: economic reasons/ Проблема распространения наркотиков в странах Латинской Америки: экономические причины

Since the middle of 20th century Latin America has faced acute problems connected with drug trafficking. Because of the rise and an increased access to new types of narcotic substances, the range of users has widened significantly. Furthermore, there appeared a number of social and economic problems, such as poverty, unemployment, enormous social stratification, the lack of sustainable income, the lack of leisure activities, corruption of higher and lower echelons of the government, the lack of adequate legislation to regulate problems concerning criminal proceedings on issues relating to drug trafficking. Hence, the issue draws adolescents and the young into the drug business and pushes forward forbidden actions. The authors sum up that futile struggle of the Latin America governments cooperating with the U.S. intelligence against drug trafficking is due to the economic problems and if this problem cannot be solved, further countering will be useless and ineffective.

The power of language: how language influences thought/ Власть языка: влияние языка на мышление

For a long time, the idea that language might shape thought was considered wrong. In the 21st century scientists at Stanford University have collected data from different countries all over the world. They learned that people who speak different languages think differently and that even various aspects of grammar can deeply influence on how we see the world. Language is a unique human gift, which can bring us one step closer to understanding the nature of humanity.

The issue of mutual influence of art and consumer society/ Проблема взаимного влияние искусства и общества потребления

The report presents a two-sided view of the relationship between contemporary art and consumer society in the modern world. This report tries to understand complicated relationship between art, artists and consumerism, by showing various examples of art works that represent the artists' views on the issue of constantly increasing consumption and people being absolutely obsessed with consumption of goods. In addition, the report does not only show this issue in the US, where the problem rose originally, but in different parts of the world, including China and Russia. In conclusion, this report proves that art market plays an important role in shaping consumer society and consumer choices of art dealers, museums and collectors. Moreover, it is stated that art market is also part of consumer society, as it is defined by the same main principles as the phenomena of consumerism.

Social credit system/ Система социального кредита

Social credit system (SCS) is a technological breakthrough of the 21st century. It represents a system of bonuses and sanctions for almost every human action. SCS has all the information about a particular person, whether it is age, gender, place of residence, or other. This system involves spying on every resident of the country or city where it will be implemented. Obviously, this will lead to stability and unbiased execution of laws. Yet is freedom the price you really want to pay?

This research is devoted to investigation of forecasts. The tradition of prediction originated in the beginning of human existence because of the necessity of survival. Today this phenomenon occurs in almost every sphere of life. For example, choosing the president we try to predict what the country would become after his victory. What is the meaning of forecasts? What are their consequences? What role do they play in modern society? I will try to answer these questions.

Moreover, this research is going to be based mostly on civilization theories, book "The Wanting Seed" by A. Burgess and film "Ex machina".

The article analyzes the general and current conditions of global migration processes. This issue is one of the most important ones on the political agenda. Migration has become a crucial issue for global society, one that is likely to dominate policy for many years to come. Migration is also increasingly presented, both in public and expert discourse, as a challenge requiring coordinated response of international community, involving both states and transnational corporations. For both of these institutions migration has as positive, as well as negative outcome. The article studies not only ways how transnational corporations use the migration processes to get benefit, but also diverse aspects of migration phenomenon existing today.

Chequers Plan and "no deal" Brexit: peculiarities and their possible impact on post-Brexit UK / План Чекерс и Брексит без сделки: их особенности и возможное влияние на жизнь Великобритании после выхода из ЕС

This report is devoted to the analysis of the main points of Chequers Plan and the content of “no deal” Brexit but the main emphasis is made on their impact on the future life of the UK after Brexit. It shows that Chequers Plan suggests the creation of the mutual trade rules with the European Union and as a result it is perceived to be the document which reflects the idea of soft Brexit. In addition, this report touches the issue of "no deal" Brexit which is used as another option of divorce with the European Union. However, such a step may lead to unpredictable financial and economic consequences that will harm the Great Britain seriously and the process of defragmentation of the country will be launched. Finally, this research has revealed that the outcome of any of these two options of Brexit will be very painful for the UK and the adaptation to the post-Brexit life will be very long.

9/11 attacks: an alternative review/ 9/11: альтернативный взгляд

The report “9/11 attacks: the alternative review” is devoted to the consideration of alternative views on terrorist attacks in September 11, 2001 in the United States. The relevance of the work is connected with the increase in the scale of modern terrorism and its consequences, as well as the US struggle against international terrorism, which began with the attacks of September 11. The topic under consideration allows looking at the events of September 11, 2001 from a different angle. The authors studied the arguments in favor of an alternative opinion about terrorist acts, which criticizes the official version. The possible versions of the events, the criticism of the official version, as well as the consequences of the attacks were examined. While preparing their work news resources, documents, and documentaries that fully or partially touch on the theme of the events of September 11 were used as sources.

Refugees as a political challenge of the 21st century: an analysis of refugees' humanitarian problems and their impact on society and the state/ Беженцы как политический вызов 21 века: анализ гуманитарных проблем беженцев и их влияния на общество и государство

According to the numbers, provided by the UN, there are more than 200 million immigrants in various parts of the world, from America to Japan. More than 2/3 of them are refugees. How should we analyze and assess this fact? Are we facing a new Migration Period? It is possible that this phenomenon is characteristic for the end of the 20th and the beginning of the 21st centuries? How should we deal with difficulties, caused by migrant waves? The study dwells on the theoretical aspect of such a concept as refugee. It is focused on historical examples and background to current events. The authors also analyze the current manifestations of immigration, first of all, in such countries as Germany, France, Great Britain, the Czech Republic, and Japan. The authors of the study try to identify the prerequisites for the phenomenon of refugees in the modern world and give practical recommendation for resolving this situation.

National identity as the factor of Russia's soft power / Национальная идентичность как фактор «мягкой силы» России

Nowadays Russia is overcoming considerable amount of obstacles connected with poor relation with other countries. It is clear that the world is changing drastically, and we need to develop our methods of diplomacy and external policy. “Soft power” is one of many ways to improve international image of our state and show it from the other side through national character, customs and different symbols that represent Russia.

In our report we will trace the history of two concepts: “identity” and “soft power” and reveal their relevance in the modern society. In addition, we will investigate the interconnection between the meanings of these terms both in scientific sphere and in political practice by an example of the image of the Russian Federation in the current system of international relations.

Mental Health Policy: depression and addiction as a new social problem / Политика в отношении психического здоровья: депрессия и зависимость, как новая проблема общества

Anxiety and depression are isolating illnesses, but sufferers are hardly alone: according to the new researches, the number of young people who have struggled with these mental health issues over the last 80 years has increased steadily. What is more, depression is all too often a gateway into drug and alcohol use. Addiction and depression are inextricably connected problems. Substance abuse is common among people who are battling a depressive disorder. Many depression sufferers, especially ones who have not been properly diagnosed, often turn to alcohol or drugs to escape.

Still, researchers say, the problem is underdiagnosed and undertreated. Many sufferers may not even consider that they are depressed, instead seeking help for physical symptoms. Nevertheless, there are some ways to get rid of depression and addiction with the help of mental health policy, which is provided by government.

The city of tomorrow: problems of urban space in the digital age / Город завтрашнего дня: проблемы городского пространства в цифровую эпоху

Today we are faced with the phenomenon of close collaboration of modern cities with advanced technologies. Smart urban systems are becoming a daily reality. The city is turning into a hybrid space that combines the common things with the digital environment. Big data, smart devices, sensory systems, the “Internet of things” are just a short list of technologies that can solve urban problems and definitely improve the population’s standard of living. The authors propose to consider some cases of modern and advanced cities and to identify the most pressing challenges faced by residents of the “cities of tomorrow”.

To the reflection on M. Weber’s “Protestant ethic” - the most ambitious fantasy in historical sociology / К размышлению о «Протестантской этике» М. Вебера – самой грандиозной фантазии исторической социологии

The work considers and criticizes M. Weber’s thesis on Protestantism from the perspective of modern historical sociology. Author uncovers the ideas of R. Collins, G. Derlugian, R. Lachmann and others that rebut Weber’s thesis. The author speaks about the biography causes, connected with family and psychologic state, which give M. Weber an idea of interdependence of Capitalism and Protestantism. In addition, the report allows to look at the process of economic growth connected with capitalism system through the prism of material factors.

Features of combating corruption: the experience of Singapore/ Особенности борьбы с коррупцией: опыт Сингапура

In the framework of this report, the key aspects of combating and countering corruption are considered. Corruption holds a special place in the destruction of state foundations. This problem impedes the development of democratic institutions and civil society, and poses an immediate threat to the national security of the country. In practice, corruption acts as a complex phenomenon, penetrating into the pores and the foundation of the state mechanism. The subject is of particular scientific interest, since the problem of corruption has currently acquired a systemic and widespread nature in the activities of authority of the State in various countries. The Republic of Singapore has much to be proud of - during the life of one generation, it managed to make a breakthrough and now it is among the advanced countries of the international community. It is also important to note that the essential factor that comes to the fore when discussing this problem is the political will of the country's highest authorities.

Russophobia as a fundamental and integral part of the Western identity / Русофобия как фундаментальная и неотъемлемая часть западной идентичности

The meaning of the word “Russophobia” is very broad and vague. For centuries, the term has been a part of political and cultural discourse and has been used in Russia and in the West for various reasons. The aim of this investigation is to reveal the significance of “Russophobia” in western countries and have a closer look at some of the reasons behind the on-going popularity of it. Experience gleaned from these studies would help to trace the dynamics of this phenomenon in the modern Western world.

The report tells about the features of democratisation in post-communist countries. The author calls in question the so-called J-curve phenomenon during democratic transit made by Charles Tilly. Does J-curve work in East Europe, Central Asia and Russia? Is there any relation between the level of democratisation and the welfare of people in that region? Based on foreign and domestic researchers of democracy, the author comes to surprising conclusions.

The 21st century social problem: possible social and political solutions to Harassment/

Социальная проблема 21 века. Возможные социально-политические пути решения проблемы Домогательства

Harassment covers a wide range of behaviours of an offensive nature. It is commonly understood as behaviour that demeans, humiliates or embarrasses a person, and it is characteristically identified by its unlikelihood in terms of social and moral reasonableness. In the legal sense, these are behaviours that appear to be disturbing, upsetting or threatening.

Trough the past years harassment became a big problem in different life-areas: police, online, workplace, mobile and many more. We often hear about harassment in politics could be racial or sexual — does not matter, because it is a large social problem yet to solve.

Political speech as an influential part of political image / Политическая речь как важная часть политического имиджа

We are going to discuss an issue of public presentation in political sphere. Every politician faces the requirement of being in public and present some group's interests. The way of a presentation defines his success and the level of society support. What is a power of political speech, how to manipulate the audience using various psychological techniques (for instance, metaphors, such non-verbal signs as gestures, mimics)? Is an ability of successful self-presentation crucial in political sphere? Can a politician be influential and powerful without this skill? We are going to provide historic examples. Moreover, how can we indicate some delicately designed speech of a politician who wants to manipulate us? How can we avoid this influence? Our report is supposed to answer these questions.

Macedonia naming dispute/ Спор об именовании Македонии

The use of the name "Macedonia" has caused a heated dispute between Greece and Macedonia, formerly a part of Yugoslavia. The conflict began in 1991 after the signing of the Declaration of independence of Macedonia, in which the state was called "The Republic of Macedonia". Greece considers that in case this name has been internationally recognised, the Republic of Macedonia may have territorial claims to Greece. On the other hand, it is very important for Macedonia to reach an agreement with the Greek government, since Greece, as a member of NATO and the EU may block Macedonia's attempts to integrate into these organisations.

Digitalization of economy in modern Russia and in the world/ Цифровизация экономики в России и в мире на современном этапе

The modern economy is drastically changing with the implementation of advanced technologies into production. Digitalization and the inevitable robotization that follows it have both positive and negative repercussions, concerning the quality of people's lives, the income of the state and its citizens, the level of unemployment, and also the alignment of forces on the job market. The influence of informatization is a key cause of many new problems in the modern world.

The purpose of this report is to: 1) Analyze the main stages of the digitalization of the economy in Russia and the world from the 1970s to modern times. 2) To reveal the main tendencies of digitalization in Russia and the world. 3) To reveal and describe the causes of the negative impact of both digitalization and robotization on modern society. 4) To reveal possible solutions to the problems caused by the digitalization of the economy. 5) To predict and analyze, which professions might come under the risk of being redundant due to the introduction of innovative technologies to the modern world.

There is one thing that is common to every individual, relationship, team, family, organization, nation, economy and civilization throughout the world. That thing is trust. Experience has shown that any collective whether it is a circle of friends or a large firm having trusting relationships between members take more pleasure from business together. However, can these advantages of trust be used to carry out the largest joint activity — public policy? That is why this study is the attempt to analyze the influence of trust on the efficiency of public administration mechanisms. Based on the reviewed conceptions, the author aims to show that confidence-building among decision makers and public figures as well as within civil society and the government is the essential precondition for social development.

A history of local civilizations and its multivariance / История локальных цивилизаций и ее многовариантность

If we look through any history book, we will see a history of different states. There we can see periods of their formation, development, crises, defending from external threat etc. However, if we read the history book from cover to cover, we will come to a certain conclusion: despite all the contradictions, nowadays we have a strong and unified state, which has been forming for centuries from the very beginning. However, is that really so? Of course, there are no what-ifs in history but we still can hypothetically play with some of its outcomes. The thing is that the history of the state is very dynamic and it can be interpreted differently in different times by different political regimes. If the American Civil war was ended by the mutual independence of the northern and southern states, there would be a separate history of Yankees and Dixies which they both were coming to since the Columbus times. That is why the question: “how should we study our history?” remains open and needs further explanation.

Features of research into historical memory and commemoration practices of the First World War in Britain in 1918–1939 / Особенности изучения исторической памяти и практик коммеморации Первой мировой войны в Великобритании 1918–1939 гг.

The report is devoted to the research of different forms of the First World War commemoration in Britain during the interwar period. Being divided into three groups according to the level of memory, the commemorative practices and mnemonic sites are analyzed as national sites of memory, commemorative practices of social groups (such as veterans' organizations) and individual acts of remembrance. The concept of "sites of memory" by Pierre Nora is a methodological basis of the article, which supposes the study of objects and subjects that can manage attendance of the past in the present to preserve memory. The processes of constructing collective memory about the war and transforming the commemorative rhetoric from militaristic to peace-minded forms in the late 1920-s are analyzed. In the first decade after the conclusion of peace, the commemoration focused on emphasizing the idea of soldiers' sacrifice, their courage and heroism in the war. However, since the late 1920s, we can see a gradual transition to the commemoration of rhetoric with appeals to avoid any war in the future.

Political impact on a language: a case study of Welsh/ Влияние политики на язык на примере Валлийского языка

One of the most important questions of multinational states is the issue of national languages. Very often, the culture of the so-called titular nation dominating in the given state prevails over the culture of small nations. This leads to a certain scarcity of culture and the extinction of the language of national minorities. Politics, as the sphere of interaction among people, certainly affects the language processes. The people in a weaker political position, consequently, lose their cultural and linguistic influence, trying to survive in the conditions of the domination of another nation. This research is aimed to consider ways of political influence on the language and the consequences that such a policy leads to. The Welsh language is taken as an example, the history of which is a good historical case in the light of the problem of the position of national languages and the influence of the political sphere on their existence.

Ultra-Orthodox Jews in modern Israeli society/ Ультраортодоксальные евреи в современном израильском обществе

The report is devoted to the controversies and conflicts caused by the presence of ultraorthodox Jews in Israel. The topic of this report is relevant as this has not been drawing much attention around the world. The purpose of this report is studying different aspects of the ultra-orthodox Jewish population and analyzing how they contradict the modern society. The object is the ultra-orthodox Jews. The subject of the research are questions concerning the historical origin, the economic, political and cultural situation of ultraorthodox Jews and most current battle between them and secular Jews. The resources on the stated issue are analyzed by sociological method. Joshua Yates' s paper "Haredim vs. Secular: Israel's Internal Culture War and the Fight for Israeli Identity" and statistical reports from Israeli research institutions are used as sources.

As a result of conducted research the conclusion was formed: Israel's ultra-orthodox Jews have proven themselves to be a very powerful force in Israeli society. They have effectively held the Israeli legal and political systems hostage and became a burden of Israel's economic development. Essentially, what made the situation so complicated is that their stand against Zionism and modernity is based on religious doctrines, which significantly reduces the possibility of their reconciliation with the state and its secular population. Tensions between secular Israelis and the ultra-orthodox Jews are at all time high, but the future of this conflict is full of uncertainty.

Socio-economic position of Boers in South Africa in the post-apartheid period /

Социально-экономическое положение буров в ЮАР после апартеида

For a long time, Boers, the white inhabitants of the Republic of South Africa, were the privileged and ruling class in the country, where nationalism and segregation flourished until the end of the 20th century. The policy of Boers was called «the apartheid». However, with the coming to power of the black population and the establishment of a policy of multiculturalism, the white population became a minority, that is, they found themselves under constant pressure from the black majority, whose actions against the «colonists of the past» cause fear among the Boers themselves. But at the same time, the facts of violence against the white minority in South Africa are a forbidden topic to mention on both the state and the world levels. This manifestation of black nationalism became a world phenomenon in the 21st century. It was formed as a reaction to the long rule of white people in «their African country».

Ethnic self-identification issue in the collective consciousness of New Zealanders /

Проблема этнической самоидентификации в обыденном сознании новозеландцев

The report is devoted to the self-identification issue in the collective consciousness of New Zealanders. This problem is relevant in the context of globalization.

The aim of the work is to find out the causes of self-identification problems among the New Zealanders.

According to the stated problems, a following set of scientific methods has been applied:

- a survey method that reveals directly the causes of self-identification problems;
- the method of semi-standardized individual interviews, which allowed to better delve into the issues of interest, as well as in the understanding of beliefs and emotions.

The conducted study makes it possible to formulate the following conclusion: the problem of ethnic self-identification in the minds of New Zealanders is primarily related to the indigenous population - the Maori, whose symbol they want to take as the basis of the new flag, thereby confirming the contradictory historical past.

Human behavior in war: whether cruelty is epiphenomenon during the hostilities/

Поведение человека на войне: является ли жестокость эпифеноменальным явлением во время боевых действий?

In examining military conflicts, it is hard not to face all the horrors of war, including horrors that are visited upon civilian population. The worst thing is that all of this is not just a matter of the world civilization’s past, but it also concerns the present time, that is the 21st century, seemingly the peak of humanity’s development. This report will try to give an answer to the question if the cruelty is an inevitable consequence of any war.

Image of the state in social media: formation features/ Особенности формирования образа государства в социальных сетях

The report is dedicated to the features of the state’s image formation in social media. The topic of the report is relevant, as social media plays a significant role in shaping citizens’ attitudes toward social and political phenomena. The aim of our study is to find out what kind of image of the state is imposed on users of social media by those or other publics. The object of the research is social networks that form the image of the state. The subject of the research is the peculiarities of formation of the state’s image among citizens by means of social networks.

As a result of conducted research, the conclusion was formed. In general, the Internet really has a great impact on the consciousness of citizens, especially today in the age of information communications. Main publics use this and form the opinion of the citizens in relation to the authorities and as it suits them. Moreover, since there are a lot of such information pages on the Internet, the opinion and perception of the state is different for different users.

The report deals with research and analysis of academic literature on extremist activity. The relevance of the topic under discussion seem obvious enough, as it lies in the essence of terrorism itself and in all its forms that are displayed on a global scale, making it intensive, inhuman, and cruel. Thus, terrorism belongs to a number of the most dangerous crimes against public safety and peace. Authors of the report undertake a detailed examination of sources, bases and pre-conditions of terrorism, process of its origin and evolution, varieties and forms of terrorism, which are examined in a historical retrospective and in modern terms. Characteristics and aspects of modern international terrorism are identified and analyzed.

Metamodernism and Manifesto of Russian metamodern as symbols of transformation of value ideas about humanitarian problems in modern society/ Метамодернизм и манифесты русского метамодерна как символы трансформации ценностных представлений о гуманитарных проблемах в современном обществе

The report is devoted to the problem of changes happening in the modern world passing from the state of postmodernism to the state of metamodernism in recent years. The topic of the report is relevant, as this is a new trend in culture, which has not yet received due popularity. The purpose of the work is studying the resources devoting to metamodernism and disclosure of basic concepts to society. The object of the research is directly metamodernism itself. The subject of the research are questions concerning the definition of the value of metamodernism, the origin, founders and the reasons for the change of postmodernism. The resources on the stated problematic are analyzed by the method of retrospection, by means of the descriptive method, the works of British artist Luke Turner, in particular, "Metamodernism: a brief introduction", "Metamodernist Manifesto", and major milestones such phenomena as the Russian metamodernism: "Manifesto of the Russian metamodernism" Maria Serova are analyzed.

As a result of conducted research the conclusion was formed: metamodemism is an absolutely new concept reflecting the various changes which have started in the end of the 20th century and the current state of the culture. It is an oxymoron, a combination and simultaneous motion of opposites. The author of the Manifesto of Russian metamodernism Serov argues that the semantic catastrophe in which our society is located can be overcome only by combining the transcendent reality with life within the logic of the material world. It is this combination of two polar experiences that will allow us to return to spiritual responsibility and come to a qualitative new thinking.

In philosophy naturalism is the idea that only natural (as opposed to supernatural or spiritual) laws and forces operate in the world. In the 20-th century W.Quine, G.Santayana and other philosophers argued that the success in naturalism in science meant that scientific methods should be used in philosophy. Science and philosophy are said to form a continuum, according to this view. Science and scientific image of the world have overcome the state when they were considered to be cells in our culturally determined scheme of reality's fundamental nature.

Mythology has always been an integral part of people’s consciousness, the main idea being to fill our life with bright colours and artistic sense. The nature of a myth has not changed: it is knowledge of the world that represents itself as true, but it isn’t really true. This is the main feature of myth and at the same time the main problem of it. Myths fulfilling the modern world are only a social resource for promotion a specific idea and they do not have a great artistic value. On the contrary, the ancient myths were a part of artistic culture. Therefore, many contemporary myths could be estimated as a harmful thing for representatives of one or another social group.

Arctic issues: drifting between blurry boundaries and hazy horizons / Проблемы Арктики: лавирование между размытыми границами и туманными горизонтами

The Arctic as a region of cooperation among countries of the Arctic Council is characterized by a balanced position on almost all issues of cooperation in the region and by the actual absence of territorial claims from neighboring states. Although changes in natural and climate conditions and the economic interests of the countries of polar territory can create a theoretical opportunity for militarization of the Arctic and the appearance of various military conflicts there, in the foreseeable future the probability of implementing any conceivable scenarios of these conflicts is very low. At the same time, it should be noted that one of the most important factors in preventing such conflicts in the longer term is to strengthen the military potential of the Russian Federation in all its components in the Arctic region.

About the hero and heroism science in the 21st century/ О герое и учении о героизме в 21 веке

We are inspired by many of the heroic deeds of courageous people. We admire brave and kind people, their exploits. Most importantly, due to heroism a huge amount of lives have been saved. The media and popular culture are constantly generating stories about heroism and evil, in fictional or real contexts. Whether we realise it or not, we are all engaged with the heroic in some shape or form. The heroes live among us today. So who is the hero today? So who can be called a hero in the 21st century?

Modern stage features of social and personal estrangement as the state projection of the world existence in Frank's papers/ Особенности современной стадии социального и личного отчуждения как проекции состояния мирового бытия в работах С.Л. Франка

The purpose of this report is to provide a new interpretation of sociological and philosophical ideas of Russian philosopher Semyon Frank. Frank discusses practically all the major issues that have ever risen in Russian religious philosophy of the 19th- 20th centuries. He deals with social and humanistic problems, which accurately describe the modern stage of our society. The main topics of his works are humanism, freedom, consequence of progress and man's place in history. Growing awareness of these problems makes the need to study Frank's works all the more important.

A rare example of catholic iconography in Russian icon/ Редкий пример католической иконографии в русской иконе

The aim of the report is to estimate an impact of Catholic iconography on the Orthodox tradition and identify the most important characteristics affecting Russian iconography. The report discusses an unusual icon which was created in the late 19th century. This icon is stored in a private collection. The icon bears some characteristic style features which were typical for Catholic iconography such as a gold frame with an ornament and painting with colored varnishes. The composition is also strange because it represents the typical type from Catholic iconography "Most Sacred Heart of Jesus" ("Sacratissimum Cor Iesu" in Latin). These facts testify to growing contacts between two cultures.

The role of ideology in the development of society / Роль идеологии в развитии общества

The power of influence exerted by ideology on society is the motivating reason for my interest in this topic. The main method of my report is to analyze the conditions for the emergence of a concept of ideology, the nature of changes in the understanding of ideology with the passage of time, as reflected in the works of political philosophers. Accordingly, in my report, I will rely on the basic philosophical works, which provide a deep interpretation of both the understanding of what is ideology and the methods of its impact on minds, and therefore on the entire social sphere.

In this report Joseph Beuys's most recognisable performances are analysed as a complex three-level ontological structure composed of a concept, the visuals and corporeality. This approach with regard to his shamanic and provocative art, often with socio-political implications, seems to be satisfactory in order to mark boundaries between three structural levels of his performances that might produce a hypnotizing impact on the viewer.

Schopenhauer is known to have been the most pessimistic philosopher in the world. However, researchers of his philosophy pay attention to ambiguous nature of his worldview. Even a cursory analysis will reveal that Schopenhauer's writings are full of optimistic motives. Moreover, his luxury lifestyle was far from being pessimistic. The approach the author takes in the statement acknowledges that Schopenhauer's system can be considered as an optimistic model.

The concept of "will" in the philosophy of Schopenhauer and Nietzsche: a comparative analysis / Понятие «воля» в философии Шопенгауэра и Ницше: сравнительный анализ

For Schopenhauer, the Will is a blind force that controls not only the actions of individual, but ultimately all observable phenomena. Nietzsche was greatly influenced by this idea of Will, although he eventually rejected it. The real insight in Nietzsche is his perception that underlying the bourgeois pretensions to morality is the ruthless, greedy, competitive war for profit. Nietzsche, however, generalizes the practical amorality of the master class into an eternal law of the human heart and mind. It is the "Will to Power."

The break-down of the primary schoolage are currently set from 6-7 to 9-10 years. This coincides with the period of primary school. During this period, there is a continuous physical and psychophysiological development of the child, providing an opportunity for systematic education at school. Socio-cultural changes in Russian society affects the nature of education of young schoolchildren. The use of multimedia in educational activities, new sources of information, the active use of digital technologies, such as PC, and integration of psycho-social activities characterize the education of young schoolchildren today.

Providing humanitarian assistance for poor countries: harm and benefits/ Оказание гуманитарной помощи бедным странам: польза и вред

My study is devoted to the analysis of the humanitarian aid in modern society. Without any doubt this issue is the most important one, since we live in the era of GLOBALIZATION that has such a property as universality, so the problems of some countries can easily pass to other countries. I have analyzed the main issues. Humanitarian disasters can happen anywhere and at any time. Whatever their cause: flood, drought, earthquake or conflict – they always lead to the death of people, the displacement of the population and bring great suffering.

So, I pay close attention to the issues of solving humanitarian assistance.

Экологические проблемы как результат человеческой деятельности/ Ecological problems as a result of humanity activity

The economic activity of mankind over the past century has led to the serious pollution of our planet by various industrial wastes. Air basin, water and soil in the areas of large industrial centers often contain toxic substances whose concentration exceeds the maximum allowable rate. Since cases of significant excess of MPC are quite frequent and there is an increase in the incidence associated with environmental pollution. Many factories are irresponsible for nature, which greatly affects the quality of life.

Sewage pollution has become a widespread problem especially with the onset of the industrial revolution in the 19th century, population growth and increasing urbanization. The main reason of it is that new built industrial plants do not recycle the wastes they produce. This became the reason of different diseases which people clashed with. Since the end of the 20th century the government has tried to implement some remedial measures. The purpose of our report is to study the problems of water pollution and their consequences, to conduct a system analysis and draw conclusions about the work done.

The transformation of values as an indicator of changes in society/ Трансформация ценностей как индикатор изменения общества

What happens today at the level of civilization is a kind of a transition period. It is based on a profound change in the paradigm of social developments. Aggravation of global problems and multifaceted integration of the world lead to the need to form global consciousness as a reflection of a new reality. A modern society faces the problem of transformation of values: some values are more stable and able to join new morality, while others die. This process is dialing a colossal speed. As a result, it becomes more and more difficult for individuals to navigate in the social space. But the transformation of the value system itself is not a positive or a negative process. The transformation of values is an indicator of changes in a social reality.

Attitudes towards motherhood in the Orthodox school environment/ Отношение к материнству в православной школьной среде

In the era of postmodernism and rapidly developing information technologies, the decline in the role of motherhood as a cultural and spiritual value has become noticeable. Socio-economic changes over the past decades have seriously affected all spheres of public life. Changes affecting public consciousness were both positive and negative. The result of the society transformation was unstable demographic situation, which can be characterized by a decrease in the birth rate and an increase in the death rate of the population. Public attitudes to motherhood, to the role of women in society, to the upbringing of younger generations have also changed, which, of course, affects not only the physical condition of a child but also the psychological one. It should be noted that the attitude to motherhood in a society is an indicator according to which it's possible to judge the development of this society or its degradation. The decisions to start a family or not, at what age to get married and how to raise children depend on the status of woman in a society and on the influence of the external environment on her. Socialization is the most important process of personality formation, which first takes place in family with the primary agents of this process; later such agents of socialization as kindergarten, school, university appear and, especially, schools, play a huge role in the upbringing and formation of an individual because they are a reflection of state ideology, attitudes in society, as well as generally accepted rules, norms, morals, values and traditions.

Among the "pain points" of the modern era, one critical issue an important place is the challenges caused by modernization, globalization, and the individual form of historicity, as well as the identification and prospects of human self-realization directly related to these factors.

Today, no one can deny the objectivity and irreversibility of the process of global integration, which raises the question of what awaits us in the future. Against the background of the increased attention of all studies to human problems, it can be concluded that in the global world, the problem of identity becomes the main discourse of everyday life.

In this paper, we will reveal the essence of the identity crisis, identify its main causes, trace trends, consequences, and identify the relationship between self-identity and globalization.

Demographic behavior of the population as a factor of demographic potential of a region in the conditions of the Russian transforming society/ Демографическое поведение населения как фактор развития семейно-демографического потенциала региона в условиях российского трансформирующегося общества

This report is devoted to the study of the demographic behavior of the population and its impact on the development of family and demographic potential of a region. The main approaches to defining the demographic potential of the population are considered. Special attention is drawn to the types of demographic behavior in families and to the factors influencing its dynamics. At the same time, the key aspect is the transition from the traditional type of family to the transformational one, since the family is a special sociocultural stability that sustainability of a society directly depends on. The problem of family transformation in the context of constant reformation process requires close attention. Family life is a “defining feature of humanity” because it is a priority value of any society. The position of the family in society, its developmental and transformational trends can serve as indicators of a state, and of a particular region, and make it possible to predict the prospects for the further progress of a country's life.

Modern forms of manifestation of racial intolerance in the United States / Современные формы проявления расовой нетерпимости в США

There are many different types of segregations: by color, nationality, religion, income level, etc. This happens not only at the interstate level, but can also manifest itself in small social groups. In my report, I would like to consider the problem of racism on the example of the United States. Nowadays, due to constant migration, interaction between people is increasing, which makes the problem of racism relevant for science and society as a whole. Humanity needs to be united. In a certain sense, the conflict of values of two cultures is a conflict of different ways of thinking, different pictures of the world, different logics. If the conflict of values of different civilizations ceases to be an intractable problem, a natural field of inter-civilization interaction will arise.

Therefore, today the energy of the atom is widely used in many sectors of the economy. Powerful submarines and surface ships with nuclear power plants are under construction. With the help of the peaceful atom, the search for minerals is carried out. Radioactive isotopes have found mass use in biology, agriculture, medicine, and space exploration.
